FAVORS WILSON'S

But Germany Must First
Make Clearer Attitude
On Belgium

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, March 5.—Lord Lansdowne, in another letter to the Daily Telegraph, says that he thinks Count Hertling's speech marks a perceptible advance in the discussion.

It contains, in the first place, a distinct expression of the wish that responsible representatives of the belligerents should hold an intimate meeting for discussion; secondly, an admission that a general peace can be discussed on the basis of the four principles enunciated by President Wilson; thirdly, the assurance that the German Chancellor will greet with joy and gladly co-operate with an impartial Court of Arbitration and, fourthly, an intimation that Germany does not think of retaining Belgium or making it a component part of the German Empire.

Commenting on the above, Lord Lansdowne asks how it is possible to reach the preliminary agreement of which Mr. Balfour spoke without preliminary conversation at a small informal meeting of authorised persons, not plenipotentiaries, such as Lord Lansdowne thinks Count Hertling means.

Long-Distance Dialogues

"Otherwise it seems that there is nothing for it but a continuation of cross-channel and trans-ocean dialogues, which are possibly not without use."

Lord Lansdowne considers Count Hertling's acceptance of President Wilson's four principles satisfactory so far as it goes and he welcomes Count Hertling's assurance that he will co-operate to realise a Court of International Arbitration.

With regard to Belgium, which is properly regarded as a test case, Lord Lansdowne admits that Count Hertling's language certainly suggests the imposition of terms which will prevent Belgium regaining her independence and therefore Lord Lansdowne examines the Papal Note of August 1, 1917, which Count Hertling quoted, and says a material passage is "plainly there must be complete evacuation of Belgium with a guarantee for her full political, military and economic independence." Lord Lansdowne thinks that it should not be difficult to satisfy Count Hertling if such a guarantee is really all he requires to prevent Belgium becoming a jumping-off ground of enemy machinations.

Clarity On Belgium Demanded

He hopes that Count Hertling, in the course of the "dialogue" which will doubtless be continued, will tell us whether that is his meaning or whether wholly different designs not hinted at in the Papal Note were in his mind when he penned the somewhat unfortunate phrase. This point requires clearing up, because, if Count Hertling's overture has been turned down, this was doubtless largely due to the interpretation placed upon his reference to Belgium. With an International Court of Arbitration working, the neutrality of Belgium is not likely to be abused as Count Hertling apprehends.

Lord Lansdowne is unable to see why the dialogue should not be usefully continued or even allowed to lapse into intimate discussion.

Basic Agreement Reached

He points out that there is a basic agreement with regard to the four principles, with regard to an International Tribunal and, he believes, with regard to Belgium, concerning which we "are certainly going to have no humbug." The restoration

Allies To Request Japan To Intervene In Siberia, London And Paris Report

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, March 5.—The Daily Mail states that the negotiations for Japanese intervention in Siberia may be expected to approach finally within the next twenty-four hours.

The Ambassadors of Great Britain, France and Italy in Tokio yesterday were intended to make representations amounting to a request to take steps to protect the interests of the Allies in Siberia.

The American Ambassador at Tokio was not expected to participate in this joint representation but no opposition from America is to be expected.

Paris, March 4.—M. Pichon, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, today made a statement before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies on the diplomatic situation and the Russo-Japanese negotiations.

The members of the Committee afterwards refused to make a precise statement but let it be understood that the Allies had agreed to leave to Japan the task of intervening in Manchuria and Siberia.

Tokio, March 6.—Viscount Uchida, the Japanese Ambassador at Petrograd, and the Chinese Minister left Vologda on the 3rd. The American Ambassador did not join them.

In the House of Representatives today Mr. Ozaki asked Baron Motono concerning Japan's mobilisation but failed utterly to elicit any information.

Mr. Doubleday Outlines Work Of U. S. Red Cross

Visiting Official Asks Americans Here To Realise
Work Of Home People

"To arouse Americans abroad to the tremendous burden now being borne by the people at home, is our chief aim at the present time. To illustrate this I may say that the enrollment in the American Red Cross has sprung from 50,000, eighteen months ago, to 20,000,000 today. Every man in the United States is doing something. If he is not actually helping in war work, he is doing the work of some one who is. American women can not move in good society any longer unless they are in some way identified with war work."

Thus spoke Mr. Frank N. Doubleday, special commissioner of the American Red Cross Society, yesterday evening during an interview at the Astor House. Mr. Doubleday is in Shanghai on a visit for the purpose of assisting in the organization of a local chapter of the society. He stated that since the chapter is already practically organized, Mr. Julian Arnold, commercial attaché for the American government, will assume the direction of Red Cross work in China, as the representative of the society's Washington headquarters.

One of Mr. Doubleday's first duties here will be to attend a meeting of the local chapter, Friday evening at 5.15 o'clock, in the Palace Hotel. He will make an address, following which election of officers for the coming year will be held.

"Another point that we consider most important and which we wish to impress on other organizations in the Far East and foreign countries," Mr. Doubleday said, "is that we are anxious not to interfere with their work. We are all working for a common cause and desire to co-operate with all. Our mission is to bring relief to all sufferers for humanity's sake. In this connection we were pleased to see an editorial which appeared in one of the Hongkong dailies welcoming the American Red Cross, and expressing a hope that a day would be set aside for it in the near future."

Telling of the remarkable spirit exhibited by people at home, Mr. Doubleday stated that all the best brains of the country have mobilized and are putting forth energy in speeding up American production and preparation. Many of the country's leading men are doing Red Cross work, while still more are actually in the employ of the government on salaries of one dollar a year. These men have given up their businesses and are devoting their entire time to war work.

He pointed out that one of America's biggest jobs was to feed the Allies. To do this, despite the fact that American soil produced $21,000,000,000 in foodstuffs and supplies, nevertheless, wheatless, meatless and heatless days had been established as measures of conservation.

Continuing with his talk on Red Cross activities, Mr. Doubleday told of the work of rebuilding devastated districts in France, of the 20,000 war hospitals now being operated on the society's capital and of the 100,000 hospital articles that are being sent forward daily to them.

He pointed out that the future of the Red Cross in Shanghai was very bright, comparing it with similar organizations in other parts of the world. In Hawaii, he said, there are but 20,000 whites, though the Red Cross Chapter there has an enrollment of 25,000. This means that large numbers of foreigners hold memberships.

The American Red Cross is peculiar, in that nine tenths of its interests are invested in other nations than America. It is said that a movement to organize a junior chapter has been started in America and it is believed that the enrollment will shortly reach nearly forty millions.

An executive meeting attended by Mr. Doubleday and local officials of the Red Cross will be held tomorrow afternoon at the consulate.

Upon winding up his work in Shanghai, Mr. Doubleday will probably proceed to Japan to take up work there in connection with the Red Cross Magazine, of which he is publisher. This organ now has a subscription list of two millions monthly.

BIG U.S. ORDNANCE BASE ESTABLISHED IN FRANCE

America Spends $25,000,000
In Plant; $450,000,000
More For Aircraft

(Reuter's Agency War Service)
Washington, March 4.—The United States War Department announces the establishment of a large ordnance base in France, the construction of which will cost $25,000,000. The base will comprise 20 large storehouses, 12 large workshops and one hundred smaller shops and magazines and will require 450 officers and 16,000 men to maintain. Its construction began several weeks ago after a great part of the material and equipment had arrived in France.

The War Department has asked Congress for a further Gold $450,000,000 for its aircraft program, in addition to the Gold $640,000,000 already authorized.

WOMEN MISSIONARIES WOUNDED BY BANDITS

Two Hunan Ladies, Alone In Home, Attacked By Armed Chinese

China Press Correspondence

Shanghai, Hunan, February 22.—Particulars of the serious wounding at the hand of bandits of Mrs. H. Pecker and Miss E. E. Trojahn, of Yuanchow in western Hunan, have reached this city. These ladies are members of the Leibenzeller branch of the China Inland Mission, and at the time of the assault Mr. Pecker was not at home. It seems that the foul act was not intended as a prelude to plunder the mission premises, but to involve the local officials against whom the bandits held scores. The deed was done by one bandit who entered the premises with a sword such as is used by the old type Chinese soldier. Meeting the cook at the gate the bandit without warning rendered him helpless by several heavy blows. On entering the house he first assaulted Mrs. Pecker who was standing near the stair case. She called for help but as the cook had already been wounded and Mr. Pecker was away, there was no one to respond but Miss Trojahn, who was in the compound at that time. After striking Mrs. Pecker unconscious the infuriated man turned upon Miss Trojahn and she suffered in a similar way. Having done all the injury he could the bandit rushed from the premises, but it is learned that he has since been apprehended and killed. Meanwhile Mrs. Pecker and Miss Trojahn are reported to be in a serious condition. Apart from very serious wounds Miss Trojahn has had her hearing affected, and Mrs. Pecker has been speechless since the deed was committed.

British Units, S. V. C., Change System For Admitting Members

No Election Of Recruits; Service
To Depend On Individual
Merit

China Press Correspondence

A sweeping modification of the regulations of enrollment in the British units of the S.V.C. is announced in the Military Gazette this week, following resolutions passed by the British officers of the Corps. The modification consists in an amendment providing for the enrollment of British subjects hereafter without ballot or election and for their retention in the Corps on a basis of individual merit and qualifications.

Commenting on the alteration the Commandant, Major T. E. Trueman, remarks:

"Put briefly the old system of recruits joining a certain unit and being trained by that unit is recommended to be abolished and all men on joining will be put through a recruit's course by the Headquarters Staff before being admitted to the units and will thus join the S.V.C. through Headquarters. This system, while opening the ranks to many who now find difficulty in joining, for various reasons, would weed out undesirables and ineffectives before the expense of uniform and equipment had been incurred for them. In conclusion I beg to state that the proposed suggestion for the alteration of Article 24 of the Corps Regulations will not affect the other national units of the Corps although I propose with the help of instructors from those units which use other than British Infantry Drill, for their recruits to be passed out by the Headquarters Staff."

The Gazette states that in accordance with the recommendation expressed by the resolutions, applicants should, during the period of the war, accompany their applications with a certificate either of exemption from service with the British Forces or expressing willingness to serve with them.

Petrograd, March 4.—Judging from the resolutions passed by many of the Provincial Soviets against peace, it seems unlikely that the Congress of Soviets meeting at Moscow on the 12th will ratify the Treaty and the fortnight granted by the Germans for ratification will probably be employed in the organization of the Red Army and means of defence. The evacuation of all material which cannot be removed is already contemplated.

Text Of Peace Treaty

Amsterdam, March 4.—The German Government officially issues the text of the Treaty of Peace between Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey on the one hand and Russia on the other.

Article I stipulates: The contracting parties live henceforth in peace and friendship.

(2). The contracting parties refrain from all agitation and provocation against the existence of the Government or State and spare the populations of the occupied regions.

(3). The regions lying west of the line agreed upon by the contracting parties, formerly belonging to Russia, shall no longer be under Russian territory.

This line in the west is to be fixed by a mixed Russo-German Commission.

The regions in question will have no obligation whatever towards Russia arising from former relations.

Russia refrains from all interference in the internal affairs of these territories and allows Germany and Austria-Hungary to determine their future fate in agreement with their populations.

(4). Germany and Austria-Hungary undertake that when a general peace is concluded and Russian demobilisation has been fully carried out, to evacuate the regions east of the line in Article 3 so far as Article 6 does not stipulate otherwise.

Russia will completely evacuate the Anatolian Provinces as soon as possible and return these to Turkey.

The districts of Erdsahan, Batsum and Kars will likewise be evacuated by Russia without delay. Russia will not interfere with the re-organization of the constitutional and international conditions of these districts but leaves these to the populations of these districts in agreement with the neighboring States, particularly Turkey.

Russia Must Demobilise

(5). Russia will without delay demobilise completely, including the newly formed forces.

Russia will without delay transfer her warships to Russian harbors leaving them there until the conclusion of a general peace or will immediately disarm them.

Warships hostile to the Quadruplice will be treated as Russian in so far as they are within Russian control.

The removal of mines in the Baltic and, in so far as the Russian power extends, in the Black Sea, will be begun immediately.

Commercial shipping in these waters is free and will be immediately resumed.

Mixed Commissions will fix further regulations, especially with reward to the routes for merchant ships which must be kept permanently free of floating mines.

(6) (a) Russia undertakes immediately to conclude peace with the Ukraine, to recognise the Treaty of Peace between the Ukraine and the Quadruplice, to evacuate the Ukraine immediately, to cease agitation or propaganda against the Government or Public Institutions of the Ukraine and to evacuate without delay Estonia and Livonia.

(b) The eastern frontier of Estonia follows the line of the River Narva.

(c) The eastern frontier of Livonia runs through Lake Pelpus and Lake Pskoff to the southwest corner of Lake Pskoff and thence over Lake Luban in the direction of Levenhof on the Dvina.

(d) Estonia and Livonia will be occupied by a German Police Force until security is guaranteed and order restored.

(e) Russia guarantees to release all Estonians and Livonians who have been arrested and guarantees the safe return of Estonians and Livonians who have been deported. [The remainder of the treaty has not yet been received by cable.]

'The Thirteenth Chair'

By Domino

At times last night I felt as if I were back again in the old London Lyceum watching a real G. R. Sims thriller or the copy of a Drury Lane drama. As a matter of fact I was one of a very large audience at the Lyceum Theater, Shanghai, and the play was "The Thirteenth Chair."

The points of resemblance arose in plot, properties and thrills. Two neat little murders—and who's the villain?—a blood stained knife concealed—where?—and shrieks galore. Bayard Veiller's play, however, is so well written and worked out and contains such a number of really witty lines that it is a little better than South London melodrama.

As usual, the acting was well-nigh perfect. Miss Valentine Sidney had her first big chance as Rosalie Lagrange. She has generally been successful in low comedy and character parts. Last night she had a really fine role. Her acting was splendid. She showed wonderful power in the tensest of scenes and undoubtedly gripped the audience and held them throughout. Miss Sidney is to be heartily congratulated upon her portrayal.

Reynolds Denniston was seen and heard to fine effect in the part of Tim Donahue. William Claire caught the interest of the house in the opening scene. He was good. Miss Florence Chapman had a difficult part in Helen O'Neill. Her conception of the role was satisfactory but I doubt if she was strong enough to maintain it. Miss Brown-Decker put in some remarkably clever work as Mary Eastwood. Messrs. Mortimer, Howard, Garry McGarry, Forbes, Miss Keeley and Miss Lloyd all contributed neat studies.

"The Thirteenth Chair" is a play to keep you on the jump. It will be repeated again tonight and can be recommended as a thriller.

An interesting and informing paper on "Chinese Newspapers in Relation to Christian Thought" was read by the Rev. W. P. The speaker strongly advocated the starting of secular newspapers, in sympathy with Christianity, in five of the important cities of China—Peking, Tientsin, Canton, Shanghai and Hankow.

During the social hour which preceded the business meeting tasty refreshments were served by Mesdames Matheson, Darroch, Heal, Woodberry, Couling and Bailey.

BELGIAN MISSION LOSES ANOTHER FROM PLAGUE

Father Maurice Reys Dies In Shansi, Fourth Member of Mission To Succumb

Word of a fourth death from pneumonic plague among the Belgian mission workers in the Saratol district has been received and is transmitted by the Rev. Father Remi Verhaegh, of the Belgian Mission here. The latest victim is the Rev. Father Maurice Reys, who died toward the end of February.

Father Maurice was born at Ypres on April 1, 1889, and came to China in 1915. In the first year of the great war he was in England and acted as chaplain to the Belgian refugees. His family at Ypres lost everything it had in the war. He has two brothers surviving him who are missionaries in Eastern Mongolia, the Fathers Albert and George Reys.

The exact place of Father Reys' death is not given, but it is supposed that he died at his Mission of Chabernoon, in Shansi, Central Mongolia, to the north of the Great Wall, between Ning Yuan Ting and To Ko To.

Conditions At Saratol

The local Mission has also received an interesting letter, dated at Erh Shih Sze Ching Ti (Saratol), February 10, telling of the progress of the disease and the excellent work being done in combating it. A translation of the letter follows:

"For the past 10 days we have had no case of plague among our Christians, not even at Kiang klun yao tse, where there were no less than 170 dead, beside two of our brave missionaries, Father Debeck and Anloq.

"I have already written you that as soon as we knew that it was the plague that had appeared, we energetically took every measure necessary to completely isolate the villages where we have residences. Our men were placed in the four corners, and nobody could enter without having passed previously 14 days quarantine.

"These are the measures which preserved nearly all our Christian communities. In five or six places, however, we were caught by surprise; a man had come in before it was known, who had the air of being physically well, but who had already in him the germs of the terrible disease. What did we do then? We immediately isolated him and also all those with whom he came in contact. The missionary alone approached him in order to give him the last sacraments. We use a cotton mask saturated with a solution of creosote, put on an additional outer cotton gown over the clothes, and, when returning from the sick, wash in hot water to which is added some disinfectant. This has preserved us until now. It is to be regretted that the three missionaries whom we lost had already contracted the germs of the disease before they knew it.

Care In Burying Dead

"In burying the dead we take special care, and in this we are assisted by some courageous people. They take the same precautions as ourselves, and are also isolated. In other districts where no missionaries are located the dead very often remain unburied. In many cities and villages the most that is done is to throw the corpses into the fields. What nests of infection! And what will happen when it begins to thaw!

"Our persuasive words and the success of our severity have led the chiefs of the villages which surround our Christian communities to imitate our ways of coping with the situation; for three weeks they have been doing what they can to isolate the villages, and to put the sick on one side. The success has been surprising. Everywhere the plague is diminishing. Where they don't take any measures the plague still continues. They were telling me yesterday of a village of one hundred inhabitants where they had allowed a person who was apparently in good health to go in, and within six days more than 30 persons were dead.

"In the district of San Tao Ho, the plague stopped shortly after the death of Father Spierings, who died in taking care of the plague stricken. There have been very few cases in the neighborhood of Ningiafu, Kansu."

Conditions At Kalgan

"That there had been no plague at Kalgan nor in the country to the east

up to February 17 is stated in another letter received at the Mission, outlining the scope of the epidemic in that region at the time. The letter follows: "Sin Wan Tze, near Kalgan, February 17, 1918."

"I will give you in a few lines, the situation in our vicariat of Central Mongolia, of just what we know here in this Central Mission.

"1.—There has been no case of plague at Kalgan nor in all the country to the east of this city.
"2.—All the country to the west of the city of Kalgan, up to Erh Tao Ho and 100 li beyond, was still intact at the beginning of this month.
"3.—In the plains of Tai Sou Mou (North of Pengchen) there have been numerous cases, but not with the Christians, except at Koungkou Mani nobo and Mikkal tou.

"4.—In the plains of Tai Hai (in the neighborhood of Ning Yuan Ting) numerous cases have occurred. Not however with the Christians, according to the latest news.
"5.—At Kwei Hwa Cheng there have been more than a thousand deaths, and the situation is very grave in the neighborhood. Many cases in the plains of Toumet (to the south of Kwei Hwa Cheng) None among the Christians, except at Che Ta Tai where there have been about a dozen cases.
"6.—In the North of Kwei Hwa Cheng, at Heou Pa, many places are infected. The disease was brought into this region by a man who came from Pei's (40 li west of Kwei Hwa Cheng); among our Christians there has been a good dozen of deaths at Wu Hao and San Hao. The other villages which are infected are Tien i ts'uen, K'ou huen tou, Wu lan hwa, Sia Kou ying tse Halakou, Ts'ien si p'ien nobo.

"Another letter contains an interesting little sidelight on the superstitious attendant on the scourge:

"Tsing Kou Tze (near Ning Yu An Ting, Shansi, February 6, 1918.)

"Here we are almost surrounded by villages which are infected with the pest, there have been deaths 10 li to the north, at Sin sou pei; at 60 li to the east, at Sa Tai Kou; at 30 li to the south. My men mount guard at the four corners of the village, and nobody moves in or out. We are copying the severity of our fellow workers in Southwestern Mongolia. If by misfortune this terrible calamity should start here I will at once isolate the family which has been attacked and will burn down the infected house.
"I have forgotten to say that within a few li from here there is a police station (K'iu ping). There are twenty men there, all provided with very good guns. In the night time towards nine o'clock we hear a well ordered fusillade. What are they doing? They are trying to kill the plague spirits (kool). These want to go into other villages to make more victims; they are not to be seen, it is true, but they clearly hear the noise of the hoofs of their horses!"

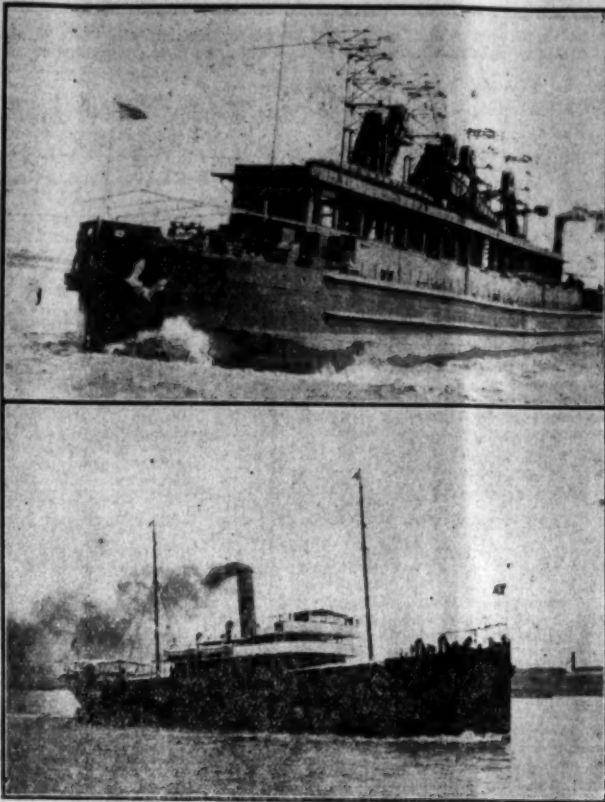

Notorious Robber Defeated In North

Letter From Missionary Tells Of Activities Of Shensi Bandits

News of the depredations of robber bands in the North is contained in a letter to the local Belgian Mission from a Belgian missionary at Siao Klao Pan, Shensi, dated February 15. It reads:

"The notorious Liu Chan-kwei has passed through this country with 2,000 robbers, of whom he is the head. We gathered all the Christians, of whom there are more than 4,000, in our fortresses of Siao Kiao and Toel Tze-liang, and in this way there has been no loss of lives amongst us. But others have had reason to complain and have suffered at the hands of these robbers. After having pillaged all the neighborhood they left toward the direction of King Yang-fu, Kansu. The latest news is that the Kansu soldiers have inflicted on them a considerable defeat."

SECRET PAPER OF 1871 CITED AGAINST GERMANY

Alsace-Lorraine Annexed To Restrict France, Kaiser's Grandfather Admitted

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, March 2.—Forty-seven years ago today the deputies of the newly annexed Departments of Alsace and Lorraine, before the National Assembly at Bordeaux, made their historic protest against their separation from the Motherland of France.

This anniversary was made the occasion for national celebrations throughout the country and at the Sorbonne all that was eminent in French politics, science and literature met under the presidency of M. Poincaré solemnly to reiterate the Declaration of 1871.

Several speeches were delivered, among which was one by M. Pichon, the French Minister for Foreign Affairs, who disclosed two important documents.

The first was a letter addressed to the Empress Eugénie on October 26, 1870, by the grandfather of the present Kaiser which reads:

"After making immense sacrifices to defend herself, Germany wishes to be assured that the next war will find her better prepared to repulse the aggression on which we can count as soon as France has repaired her forces and found allies."

"It is this sad consideration and not a desire to aggrandize a country whose territory is already large enough that forces me to insist on a cessation of territory which has no other object than to push back the starting-point of the French armies which, in future, may come to attack us."

"Is it possible," asked M. Pichon, "to make a cleaner sweep of the legend which Count Hertling seeks to propagate, that the annexation of Alsace-Lorraine was due solely to the desire to give back to Germany former German territory of which she had been dispossessed by France?"

"Germany," he continued, "the day she let loose the present war attempted to dishonor France by making her an accomplice in the cowardly trap set for Europe. I will prove it by the revelation of another document the German Chancellor carefully preserves in the profoundest mystery of its most secret archives."

"It bears the signature Bethmann Hollweg and is dated July 31, 1914."

"On that day it is known that the German Chancellor, in ordering von Schoen, his Ambassador in Paris, to notify us of the existence of a state of danger of war with regard to Russia, instructed him to request us to remain neutral and to accord us eighteen hours to reply."

"What is not known and I now reveal is that the telegram containing those instructions ended thus:

"If the French Government declares it will remain neutral, Your Excellency will be good enough to inform it that we demand, as a guarantee of neutrality, it shall deliver up the fortresses of Toul and Verdun, which we shall occupy and give back again after the finish of the war with Russia."

That, commented M. Pichon, is how Germany wanted peace the moment she declared war. That shows the extent of her sincerity when she pretends we forced her to take arms in her own defence. Such is the price she intended to make us pay for our infamy in delivering up to her our Ally, Russia, and repudiating our signature as Prussia repudiated hers by tearing up the treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium.

Hertling Speech Advances Peace

of Belgium is, of course, as President Wilson puts it, "the healing act," but it may be necessary to ensure similar treatment of the extended areas in France or elsewhere occupied by the Central Powers.

One German statesman after another has disclaimed a policy of conquest by annexation, but the difficulties are much more formidable when we approach the claims of the transfer of territory from one power to another.

Such difficulties will arise with regard to Alsace-Lorraine, the Italian claim to certain districts in Austria and the British claim to parts of the Turkish Empire. Lord Lansdowne thinks it is inevitable to submit questions of the latter class to the Peace Congress which Mr. Lloyd George said will be held at the close of the war.

Lord Lansdowne concludes: "Mr. Lloyd George added a special suggestion in which President Wilson apparently concurs: that the question of the German Colonies, one of extreme difficulty and delicacy, be reserved for such a Congress. Does anyone suppose that these questions could be settled and in reasonable time while the war is still raging? Can we do more now than to lay down in advance the principles upon which the Peace Congress would deal with them and can we improve upon those which President Wilson proposed and which both sides apparently are not indisposed to accept?"

Daily Telegraph Disagrees

The Daily Telegraph, commenting on Lord Lansdowne's letter, points out that considerable events have happened since Lord Lansdowne wrote his letter last November, culminating in Russia's acceptance of an humiliating peace.

The only way in which Allied statesmanship can confront that fact is by stiffening its spirit and firmly facing the prospect of a prolongation of the war. That is Mr. Balfour's way and the way of a vast mass of Mr. Balfour's fellow-countrymen and it is surely unnecessary to recapitulate the many obvious reasons in support of Mr. Balfour's view that a basic agreement is very far from having been reached.

It is enough to repeat that German statesmanship cannot expect to have its mere word taken, as Lord Lansdowne apparently does, when it professes liberal and enlightened political aims. "We are quite unable to accept Lord Lansdowne's view that Count Hertling's speech marks perceptible advance in the discussion."

AMERICAN LINES GASED AND SHELLED BY ENEMY

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, March 2.—The following telegram received by wireless from San Diego, Cal., dated March 1, have been handed to Reuter's Agency by the American Legation:

American Front, France.—A stray German shell today struck an American munitions train, killing two men and wounding four. A town behind the American lines has been shelled. One person was killed and five were wounded. The number of gas sufferers increased by twenty today, making the total eighty. The American artillery obliterated an enemy mine throwing position. A strong German attack, following a heavy barrage, was repulsed on Chemin des Dames with heavy enemy losses. There were no American casualties. Five Frenchmen were wounded. Yesterday an American officer and a soldier were killed and two were wounded by shell fire. One man is dead of the eight men who were gassed in the Toul sector. These are all New Englanders.

Washington.—The Cherokee, a naval tug, has foundered in a gale off Delaware Cape. It is believed that thirty are lost.

Chicago.—Mr. Gompers, testifying before the Stockyards Wages Arbitration Committee, declared:

"Labor will make every sacrifice for the successful prosecution of the war but will not make sacrifices for private profiteering during the war." He advocated an eight hour day on the grounds of economy, health and morals.

Washington.—Orders have been issued for the commencing of the House of Representatives has passed the Railroad Bill by 337 votes to 5. The House reversed its earlier action by voting 211 to 165 in favor of placing the rate making power in the President's hands, also on the provision limiting Government operation after the war and restoring the two years limit.

London.—The British casualties during February show a remarkable decrease. They totalled 18,961. Killed or died of wounds, 153 officers, 4,013 men; missing, 468 officers, 14,297 men.

RESTATE WAR AIMS, MR. HENDERSON URGES

Should Be Consistent With Ideals; Labor Wants Peace Only When Honorable

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, March 4.—Mr. Arthur Henderson, speaking at East Ham today, advocated that the Allies should restate their joint war aims, which should be consistent with the high ideals for which we entered the war.

British Labor he said was of opinion that the war should continue only so long as is necessary to secure world peace. This meant the destruction of militarism everywhere, an honorable and a democratic peace based on international justice and compliance by the enemy with indispensable political and military conditions to ensure that the peace shall be permanent.

Mr. Arthur Henderson emphasized the necessity for reparation and said that a League of Nations for the settlement of all international disputes was indispensable.

He advocated doing everything to encourage German Socialists to throw off the yoke of autocracy and militarism as the length of the war largely depended on that, but, he said, the German treatment of Russia made peace by conciliation much more remote.

Mr. Henderson said that the settlement forced upon Russia showed that the German Government continued to cherish schemes of annexation and domination and steadfastly to gratify the lust for territorial aggrandisement and political supremacy. The German people must be made to realize that victory for such ruthless militarism would permanently fasten upon the democratic nations an awful burden of armaments and enforced services.

The policy of the Labor movement was not to hoist the white flag nor to condone the enemy's brutality, nor to leave Germany with all her powers for mischief unimpaired. Before the conciliation policy of Labor could operate, both sides must be seriously disposed to conciliation. One side could not hold out the olive-branch and the other the sword.

Allies Will Benefit By Argentine Policy

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Buenos Aires, March 4.—El Diario states that President Irigoyen is resolved to conduct the international policy of the Argentine still more in favor of the Allies and to devote the available resources of the country to their support.

WEATHER

The pressure has moderately risen in the Northern and Central China and somewhat fallen in the South, thus causing a moderate but rather regular gradient along the whole coast. Fine weather with northerly breeze in the North, rising or overcast at the latitude of Shanghai. Fair or cloudy over the China Sea. One may still expect a moderate winter monsoon.

SHANGHAI, MARCH 7, 1918

A Problem For The Allies

WHILE no one outside the inner circle, or the Supreme War Council of the Allies, can be expected to know what the Japanese and Allied plans are with regard to intervention in Siberia and Russia proper, yesterday's cables show conclusively that negotiations of extreme importance are in progress. It is evident that these negotiations have been divided into two sections—that the Allies are conferring among themselves as to the form this intervention shall take and that the Japanese are conferring with Russia on the same subject.

M. Pichon, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, refers to these negotiations between Russia and Japan in his statement to the French Senate's Committee of Foreign Affairs, and members of that committee allow it to be understood that the Allies are proposing to leave the task of intervention in Siberia to Japan. The Daily Mail says that the negotiations were expected to reach finality on March 6—yesterday.

Meanwhile, Reuters draws attention to the Congress of Provincial Soviets which is to be held in Moscow on March 12, declaring that the indications are that this Congress will refuse to ratify the peace concluded at Brest-Litovsk, in which case the war between Russia and Germany will be resumed. The evacuation of Petrograd and destruction of war material that cannot be withdrawn, together with the reorganization of the Red Army for the defense of the country, are other items in the new plan.

Meantime the "evacuation" of Petrograd by the Allied embassy staffs continues unchecked. Most Allied observers probably will be disposed to quarrel with this movement as, on the face of it, it looks like abandoning the field to the Germans. The point here probably is that the Allied Governments have not recognized the present Russian Government and have been dealing with it unofficially because it is the only shred of government of any kind left to be dealt with. And a further point, of course, is that they don't want to recognize the Bolshevik Government now or at any other time.

The Bolshevik Government has been issuing proclamations daily calling on the working and peasant classes of Germany, France and Great Britain to join the similar classes of Russia in a "Holy War" against the bourgeoisie of the countries named. They want to take all the principles and ideals of the Allies and all the criminal and autocratic ambitions of the Central Powers and make of them one huge conflagration, from the ashes of which they hope to see ascend, phoenix-like, a beautiful international fan-tailed and iridescent Bolshevik bird of peace! It is to be a grand and glorious dream but in trying to work it out the be-dazzled and infatuated Trotsky and Lenin got themselves so bemused and entangled that they had to sign a peace with the Germans, a peace that is so humiliating and so disgraceful that even their own blind followers are repudiating it!

The Pulse And Temperature Of France

By Woods Hutchinson, M.D.

PART II.

A second peculiarity of modern war, which has helped France to adjust herself and maintain a working balance even under the terrible strain which she has been subjected to, is that it has been so emphatically and overwhelmingly a war of machinery and big guns. Its motto is a paraphrase of Napoleon's "audacity": "Ammunition and again ammunition and always ammunition." By another of its paradoxes "shells to save life" in Lloyd George's phrase, for the army that has most guns and ammunition loses fewest soldiers in an offensive.

A war of munitions and railroads, of telephone and telegraph and electrical equipment of every imaginable sort, of huge howitzers mounted like observatory telescopes, moved by clockwork and aimed with surveyors' transit, of airplanes and motor lorries and motor ambulances by the hundred thousand. This enormous and incessant demand has stimulated manufacturing and production of all sorts so tremendously, new factories springing up everywhere like mushrooms to meet it, that the whole civilian population at home, the women and children of the soldiers, and the men too old or physically unfit for military service, instead of being thrown out of work and left to starve have had abundant employment at double and even treble the wages they had even dreamed of before.

So great has been the rise in wages, so keen the demand for labor, that many a soldier's wife or daughter is actually making more money at home in the war factory than the head of the family was able to earn in time of peace. Wages of all sorts on an average have doubled and in not a few fields of industry trebled since the outbreak of the war, and as it is one of the axioms of military and man-power experts that a nation is physically able to put no more than one-tenth of its total population in the field for active service, which means about one-third of all the males of working ages, this means that most of the other two-thirds and all the women—save those with young children—of the community have been earning higher wages than they ever did in their lives before.

Wages have actually kept pace with the higher cost of food, and as many families have now two and three wage-earners in the place of one, the net result has been, in the almost unanimous opinion of those interested and expert in labor conditions in France, that the great mass of her people are better fed, better clothed, and working shorter hours and under more favorable conditions than they were before the war.

And this was the distinct impression, for whatever it may be worth, which I gained from my own personal observation. I spent nearly six months in France last year, from spring till late autumn, and made numerous journeys both to and from the Fronts and in the interior, covering some thirty or forty different regions and towns, from country districts up to great cities, and found surprisingly little signs of unemployment, of destitution, or of visible underfeeding or food scarcity.

I was particularly careful to visit the industrial sections of the cities and towns, the slums if any, and the poorer and outlying streets of the country towns and villages, to watch the crowds at the factory gates, on the streets, in the parks in the evenings and on holidays, and to especially keep a lookout for that best and most graphic index of the vital condition of a community, who faces of the children.

Much to my relief and gratification, after the pessimistic and discouraging reports which I had heard before I visited France, I found the overwhelming majority of the quaintly charming and intelligent little future citizens of the republic playing hard and happily, with bright eyes, fresh color, and sturdy, bare brown legs. They scurried eagerly about, shouting at the tops of their voices, and making wonderful gesture play as merrily as if they hadn't a care in the world, and were as well nourished and vigorous, as free from visible defect or disease, as the happy groups which can be seen on our own streets.

I was told by my colleagues, both French and American, who were engaged in work among the children and in children's hospitals, that the high value placed by war on children and child life, so to speak, had so stimulated the activities of the many public-spirited organizations for child welfare, both French and Allied like our own American and the English Red Cross and many equally devoted but smaller organizations, that the actual infant mortality rate or death rate among children under one year of age, instead of increasing, had been brought down to one of the lowest levels in her history.

Incidentally, a like unexpected and gratifying result has been brought about in many districts in Belgium by the devoted efforts of Belgian philanthropists and physicians backed by our American Belgian Relief Commission. And of course Germany, who did not put one little finger to the work, is characteristically claiming the entire result as one of the visible blessings of Prussian rule and of the sway of Kultur.

To put it roughly, a considerable share of the huge sum voted by the French Government for war expenses has gone directly back into the pockets and the lives of the working class majority of her population in the form of high wages, and while this will have to be paid for some day, yet for the present it great helps to redress the balance of industry and economic prosperity so rudely shaken by war.

Part of it is an actual drain upon the total reserves of the country in the sense of a new draft upon the strength and vital resources of its women, who have so nobly and splendidly risen to and met the emergency. But not all of it by any means, because the thing which has made it possible has been the introduction of the most modern labor-saving machinery on a tremendous scale, as well as modern efficiency methods of operation.

The motor power for this machinery is being largely and increasingly drawn from the hitherto untapped natural water-power of the country. A most interesting and striking shift of the great manufacturing industries of France from the north-eastern regions where the coal was down to the plains and valleys of the south and southeast near the mountains where the water power is. Which also has the advantage of helping to offset the German occupation of some of the richest coal mines and of placing the industries and their swarms of workers at a safer distance from bomb-dropping raids and other hostile interference.

France has not lost for a moment either her splendid courage or her wonderful economic shrewdness and foresight in this terrible war, by a long sight. This utilization of her water will be a permanent addition to her national assets after the war.

It is not too much to say that so much of this superb contribution of war work by the women of France has been done by the aid of labor-saving machinery, under such greatly improved industrial working conditions, with shorter hours and higher wages, that it has been no greater drain upon their resources and their health than the household or small shop or farm occupations which they were engaged in before the war. Part II.

As I have already said, the so-called North Grand Canal from Tungchow to Tientsin is, properly, the Pei Ho. When first used as a canal, it was found that the river did not carry enough water in the dry season to render navigation possible, so that it was necessary to procure an additional supply. This was simply done by leading into the Pei Ho another river called the Chao Ho, now only known as one of the main tributaries of the Pei Ho, but as a matter of fact originally forming part of the catchment area of the Peitang Ho. The consequences of such a step, whereby the natural drainage system was suddenly thrown out of balance, could not be but very serious unless adequate precautions had been taken; but this was not done. The Chinese have never known any thing else but building dykes and when a break takes place they content themselves by repairing it or by building a new dyke further away from the river; that is all. Every break, however, carries more consequences with it than the inundation of the country, because below the break the river will silt up and so in this case the condition grew gradually worse causing renewed dykebreaks, which happened more and more frequently. At last some floodescapes were made, to deal more effectively with the freshets but as they were all constructed with a high silt, which practically only allows the water nearest to the surface to escape, whereas the water near the bottom, which contains naturally more silt, most of the silt carried down by the freshets, remained in the river, and was dropped somewhere below the overflow, so that although temporarily some relief was procured, the capacity of the river was not improved in the long run but went instead from bad to worse. And not only did the river become more shallow, but it adopted also a more winding course. Apparently this was just the very thing which was desired, for when the river made once a short cut during a strong freshet of one mile long, shortening the route by 9 miles, it was restored again to its original bed because the current was too strong, to which shipping objected. Even the Hai Ho, although it had to serve as outlet for all the rivers, was kept as small as possible in order to prevent the water escaping too quickly during the dry season. So it has gone on for several centuries until at last, a few years ago, the river sought a new course by leaving the old bed at a place about forty li above Tungchow. The water follows now a tributary of the Peitang Ho. A part reaches the sea via that river, but the greater part spreads over the country and either evaporates or reaches some other outlet. An attempt has been made to bring the river back again to its old bed but it was a useless attempt for the old river had been ill-treated too long to be of use any more. The little water which is now flowing through the Pei Ho comes from a small watercourse which enters the main river near Tungchow. If it were not for that there would have been no water at all. Here you have what is left of which once was the main drain of a catchment area of 9,000 square miles.

And now we come to the most notorious of all the rivers in this province, that is the Hun Ho, or Yung Ting Ho which is the official name, and means "ever-lasting unchanging river." It sounds rather funny when one knows that this river is anything else but stable, but it happened this way. Many times the river changed its course until at last the authorities believing they had found a radical

Why is it that this river is worse than the others? In principle it does not differ at all, but the point is that on account of its magnitude and the comparatively short distance from the hills to the sea, the amount of silt carried down and the force of the freshets are much more keenly felt than in the case of the other waterways. Moreover, the course of the Hun Ho leads through a rich district and passes close near the capital and the most important trade center of the North so that the river enjoyed every one's attention, which led to much being done to avoid the nuisance of inundations and the effect of the silt which threatened the very existence of every waterway with which it came in contact. The other rivers bring down much silt and cause inundations just as well, the name Sha Ho which one hears continually when visiting the various watercourses crossed by the Peking-Hankow Railway line, is a sure proof that much silt is carried down. But those rivers are too far away to receive much attention and had no patron who were influential enough to draw the attention of the higher officials to their shortcomings and thus they remained as they were and continued their course unhindered. After all this has been to their advantage, for the Hun Ho, which was very much interfered with and but in such an unskillful way, is now in such a bad condition that it is more dangerous than if it had been left alone or handled in a proper way. In destruction-bringing capacity the Hun Ho is now only surpassed by the Yellow River.

As I have already mentioned, the natural tendency of the rivers in this province is to raise the plain, because they bring down more silt than the current along the lower courses is able to carry. This plain raising can only take place, however, if the river is free to go where it likes, but as this is often not welcome to those whose homes are affected, it is only natural that man has tried to restrict the process to a certain area only and commenced to confine the river between dykes. But in the case of the Hun Ho man was not content with having restricted the plainbuilding to a certain strip of land, but went even so far as to prevent the river from continuing this process as far as its mouth, that is as far as the sea, and this is where the fatal mistake was made, a mistake of which the bitter fruits are tasted yearly but this last summer in particular.

In the upper reaches of the Hun Ho the gradient is steep and consequently the current strong enough to keep all the material brought down from the hills in suspension, but as the slope becomes more gentle, gradually decreasing from 1:250 to 1:500 above the Peking-Hankow line to 14:000 and even 1:10000 further downwards, the velocity decreases also, with the result that a great part of the soil hitherto carried is dropped, the heavier material like gravel and sand first the lighter silt afterwards. This naturally causes the riverbed to rise, and this has already taken such proportions that the bed is at many places over twenty feet higher than the surrounding country. That under such conditions dykebreaks are far more likely to occur and are far more serious than if not so much silt had been deposited is evident. And yet this silting has been willfully accelerated by restricting the outlet; if this had not been interfered with, or better still had been improved, the process of silting would have been retarded and dykebreaks would not have taken place so frequently nor have been so severe.

As it is now, the water which rushes down during freshets cannot escape quickly enough and consequently rises higher and higher until at last the floodwater, having to find an outlet somehow, does so by bursting the dykes, ruining millions worth of crops and property.

Again, the Grand Canal is the indirect cause of all the trouble, for in order to prevent the silt entering this waterway, which in those times was considered of the utmost importance, the Hun Ho was not all allowed to flow unhindered to the sea, as it has to pass the canal, but was led to various low lands then existing where the water was stored up and from where it could only run off through a small outlet. In the course of time, however, all those places became filled in, so that as a last resource the dykes enclosing the river near its present junction with the Pel Ho were built about 50 li apart thus forming a large reservoir covering about 200 square miles. In this reservoir an enormous amount of water could be stored up without causing the water-level to rise too much. At the same time it acted as a clearing basin in which a great part of the silt was deposited so that the water eventually entering the Grand Canal carried comparatively only little silt. In this way it was possible to keep the Canal in good order at least for as long as the reservoir existed but this could only be temporary. Now the entire area once a storage basin has been transformed into a strip of very fertile land from twenty to thirty feet higher than the country around. What will happen now? Not only have the freshets no room for expansion any more, and are therefore more dangerous with regard to dykebreaks; but if, on the contrary, the dykes should not break, something far worse will take place, for then the full force of the enrush of water will reach the delta and will make for itself an outlet large enough to carry the entire quantity further downwards. And as this removal by scour of enormous quantities of soil the result will be most disastrous. For what will happen? The delta being much higher than the Pei Ho the water coming from there will simply rush in; lower down however in the Pei Ho, and subsequently the Hai Ho, the slope is much more gentle so that the current will slacken speed and the greater part of the soil removed from the delta will have to be dropped. This will cause such rise of the riverbed that the capacity of the Hai Ho will be considerably reduced and this reduction may even be so much that navigation will be seriously hampered, if not rendered entirely impossible.

Cotton Market

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co. write as follows in their report for week ending March 7:—
Chinese Cotton.—Our Market, since our last circular was issued, continued without faltering to assume a more bullish aspect culminating at the close from Tia. 2.00 to Tia. 2.50 above the level ruling last week and tendency of the extending firmness will very likely establish before long rates surpassing those prevalent during and about the middle period of last year.
Although considerable business is reported to have been transacted, offerings were not altogether absorbed as anticipated, possibly due to some contemplated reactionary movement which under the circumstances will hardly prove successful especially so in the face of reports of expected shortage in supplies in the Cotton World in general and such a situation is likely to be prolonged well into the time of our next season's crop estimates.
Considering therefore the present all-around bullish trend of the market it is very difficult in these circumstances to indicate operations either one way or the other and extreme vigilance is advisable in order to avail oneself of any unexpected turn of events. Tone of the Market, Firm.

The week under review has been reduced to two business days, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday being holidays owing to the Race Meeting.
The tragic end of the Race Meeting has cast a gloom over the Colony and very little business has resulted in consequence. It is to be hoped that next week will see a return to normal business conditions once more.
In view of the above facts it is unnecessary to go over in detail the various stocks, last week's quotations still holding good, with the exception of Indo-China shares, which have risen from 158 to 160.

RUPERT BROOKE BEST WAR POET, SAYS DR. POTT

Praises slain Youth In Interesting Talk On Literature Of the War

Speaking before the Union Church Literary and Social Guild last evening on "The Literature of the War," Dr. P. L. Hawks Pott gave a valuable and interesting outline of the writings which the world conflict has inspired. Dr. Pott divided the field of war literature under the heads of writings dealing with the placing of responsibility for the war, the political and psychological causes of the war and its history, descriptive accounts, interpretation, humor, fiction, prophecies of the future and poetry. He dealt briefly with the character and quality of the most representative works in most of these departments, quoting excerpts, and in the major portion of his paper took up the poetry of the war, which he held as one of its most truly interpretive phases.
As an indication of the immense number of works which have been inspired by the struggle, the speaker mentioned that at a recent exposition in Paris more than 1,000 volumes were on exhibition, the product of writers of the principal warring nations.
In dealing with poetry, Dr. Pott confined himself to that of England and America and stated that thus far the great poets of the day had not produced anything up to standard but that the best poetry during the struggle has come principally from hitherto unknown writers. He spoke particularly of Alan Seeger, the young American, and Rupert Brooke, the young Englishman, both killed in action, and characterized the latter as the greatest of the war poets.
"His five great connected sonnets," declared the speaker, "will remain among the finest in the English language and his spirit lives as part of the light that is England's."
He quoted these sonnets and also Seeger's "Rendezvous With Death," possibly of the most colorful verse that the war has produced.

FENG TELLS CABINET HE WANTS TO RESIGN

But Is Withheld By His Advisers; Chang Tso-lin To March on Capital?

Reuter's Pacific Service
Peking, March 6.—The papers give prominence to the reports that President Feng Kuo-chang intends to resign. It is stated that during the Cabinet meeting yesterday President Feng Kuo-chang summoned the Ministers to his office and informed them that General Chang Tso-lin continued to pour troops into Chihli and intended to send some to Langfang. The President was at his wit's end and thought his resignation might improve the situation. The Ministers held a conference and decided to send Wang Kuo-min to Ankang to consult General Ni Shih-chung, the Tsuchun of Anhui.
A telegram from Szechuen states that Tang Chi-yao has appointed Hsiung Ke-wu Military Governor of Szechuen in the name of the Generalissimo of the Canton Government.

Chang Marching On Peking?
A private telegram received here last night said that part of Chang Tso-lin's troops have reached Tientsin. The Eastern News Agency also reports that another detachment has started toward Peking from Lanchow, 100 miles from the capital.

The President has sent Wang Kuo-min, Minister of Finance, to Peking to discuss with Ni Shih-chung the attitude of Chang Tso-lin. In the meantime Mr. E. S. Little here is continuing his efforts to bring about a peace conference. He has telegraphed Tuan Chi-jui, Ni Shih-chung and Chang Tso-lin urging them to modify their attitude. He is also circulating the Chinese Chambers of Commerce and newspapers with a letter advising them to create a public opinion favoring peace.

Spinal Meningitis Case Reported In Shanghai

One case of cerebro-spinal fever was discovered in Shanghai during February, according to the Monthly report of Dr. Arthur Stanley, local health officer, issued yesterday. The case was that of an isolated Chinese in the French settlement and no significance is attached to it. The disease is common in all parts of the world and may occur at any time, says Dr. Stanley. It is not believed that the reported epidemic at Hongkong will affect this city.
